MANY a Western New York high school football coach has stopped to watch Park School's sixman football team on its Snyder campus off Harlem Rd., and remained to exclaim: "Boy, I wish I had that fellow on my team!"

"That fellow" is Terry Check, 6-foot, 1½-inch 190-pound star of Park's sixers, undefeated under Coach Herb Mols in 19 games since 1947.

Terry, otherwise known as M. A. Cheek III, is carrying on a tradition set up by his grandfather, M. A. Cheek, as an Oakfield, Califatrack star and furthered by his father, M. A. Cheek II, now headmaster at Park School and the 1924 football captain at Harvard University.

University.

Terry also is a basketball base-ball and track star but six-man football is his best sport.

"Terry could make any 11-man high school team in the area," says Goach Mols.

"Terry smiles and says: "I've never played 11-man football, but this six-man game isn't easy."

Terry, calling the plays and running from the wingback and fullback positions, has scored four touchdowns, passed for two others as well as two extra-points and drop-kicked four points in victories over Clymer (its first loss in history) and Pebble Hill of Syracuse.

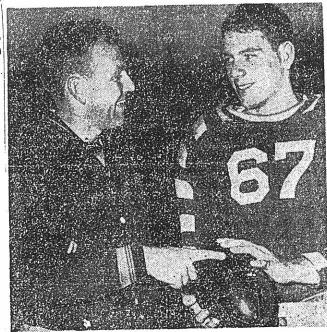

Other Park first-stringers clude: Ends Joe Scandurra and Len Gross, Center Ray Sendker and Backs Ted Okie and Dan Pantera. "Six-man football teams consist "Six-man football teams consist of two ends, a center and three backs, Coach Mols explained.

"Besides the number of players, the main difference of the six-man game from 11-man game is that a team has to move the ball 15 yards for a first down, the field is 80 instead of 100 yards long. Every play must be preceded by a distinct behind-the-lines pass before the ball can be advanced by a run or a forward pass.
"Six-man football is the answer for schools who have too few play-
